COLONIAL BROT FACTORY AT WAVERLEY—Yesterday afternoon Sir John Young (accompanied by his Private Secretary) paid a visit to Mr. James Vickery, the owner of the factory at Waverley, where his Excellency, with the Governor, has already manifested in everything enterprising and progressive. On his arrival in this community, was planned to have the premises visited and to see the various samples of colonial goods—manufactured in the establishment, and to see about to be transmitted to the Intercolonial Exhibition at Melbourne. The building in which this new industry has been developed is a plain and substantial stone erection, and is one of the best in the colony. It is situated on the sea, in a healthy and beautiful quarter of a mile near the city, and is well adapted for the purpose, and affords every convenience. The length of the factory (which is from north to south), is one hundred and three feet; the width on the southern end being twenty-five feet

the necessary appliances for making and repairing. The necessary appliances for making and repairing were never far from time to time, required for the machinery. At the back of the building is a deep water tank formed by the solid rock for stone water. A large supply of water has thus been secured, invaluable in case of fire and for the factory, which has been in full working order for the last six months past, at present employing to a hundred men. The work is not so hard at work to supply the increasing demands of the factory. The busy scene which presented itself to Sir Robert Young was not less novel than pleasing, and he was struck by the activity of the people.

tion, especially that part of the hemely spangled shawled Young Australia silently guiding the sailing needles of a dozen or two of sewing-machines, clicking away like electric telegraphs which had undertaken to expose expensiveness of the art and mystery of boot-closing. Everything made on the works is cut out by machinery, and much of the machinery is, even to the most uninitiated, extremely interesting. There are machines for cutting and sewing every part of the upper portion of a boot, whatever may be its nature, — a light foot, a heavy boot, a small boot, a man's boot, the boot of a child. A beautiful machine (called, we the "Electric Press" cuts out thick slices of every item that comes through the mill with a magical accuracy. Another press, of a similar character, not only cuts, but separates and prepares high heels, which can be used as puttees as to height and size, etc., according to the ingenious device of a workman named DeLano, who is employed in the factory. The last machine is a large room occupied by the different branches of the shoe business. The manager of this department is Mr. Howitt; Mr. M'Coy, the making foreman, is the head of the closing department; Mr. Parry; and the head of the cutting department, Mr. Mills. Mr. Thomas is the head of the last department, and Mr. Richard is the head of the sole department. The manager of the building. His Excellency remained outside our comfortable time in the factory, and expressed his hearty protection to the proprietor of all that he saw. In the

to last to fit his Excellency's feet, a pair of boots was made from the leather with which the work could be turned out. Amongst the boots to be transmitted to the Melbourne Exhibition were some very beautiful specimens of workmanship—a pair of ladies' boots, a gentleman's boots, which none but a first class workman could attempt. The last of the boots which I saw was a novelty, which is to be called after a distinguished lady, if (as is more than probable) she shall honour the pattern with her approval. The "Lady Young boot" is a pair of boots (a universal) expected, with the same name, to be worn by the ladies of the fair. I am not so well informed, cut in one piece, and the work is technically correct. I do not know whether this description is technically correct; whether it is or not, the boot it refers to is a shoe (which is in the bootmaking trade as represented in a shoe).

COLONIAL TYPE.—A very excellent specimen of type set in Sydney, by Mr. A. Wright, jun., at the Australian Colonial Typographical Office, 100, Yurong-street, is to be seen at the shop of Mr. James H. Jeweller, King-street. The type is made up in the form of six columns, and contains the following scraps of text:—"Clarendon," "Script," and "Italian" founts, the letters being enclosed in a handsome card case. The matrices appear to have been well cut, and the castings are clear and well finished. The metal is sound and well tempered, and will bear comparison with the best specimens of the English foundries. Around each page are specimens of all furniture, which are cast with care and accuracy.

COLONIAL WOOD.—Mr. Hinton, cabinet-maker, of the same establishment, has prepared four planks of ornamental wood, which he has submitted to the inspection of the cedar, one with a mottled, and the other with a curved stain. The other two samples are of less known woods, one being known as the yucca, and the other as the ash. The yucca contains a very heavy, wavy, good polish, but the ash is very superior as an ornamental wood, and is used to work up into furniture. As cedar becomes scarcer and our joiners will have to pay more attention to other kinds of wood, and of these there is a great variety in the market, only that which requires to be better known to be better appreciated.

AMUSEMENTS.—Mr. O'Neill retains his popularity with the patrons of the Victoria. His delineations of Irish characters generally are unquestionably effective, and amongst his most successful may be ranked that of Gerald O'Shea, in the Widow's Tears. The Widow's Tears is a the first time on Monday evening, and repeated it on two subsequent nights. On Thursday night it gave the first performance at the Irish Lion, which, with the fine company, the orchestra, and the superb scenery, was a great success. For that and Friday night, the company were to have been at the Strand Theatre, but the manager, Mr. J. H. P. Jones, has been so kind as to allow the company to remain at the Irish Lion, and to give the first performance on Saturday night. The company is a very fine one, and the manager, Mr. J. H. P. Jones, is a very kind and generous man. The company is a very fine one, and the manager, Mr. J. H. P. Jones, is a very kind and generous man. The company is a very fine one, and the manager, Mr. J. to a highly successful concert at the School of Arts on Friday evening, before a large and fashionable audience. The programme was well chosen, and was in the minor; for violin, violoncello, and piano, by Madame de St. Denis. Of the lady we must speak in terms of commendation. She played with great freedom and facility of execution, yet with the nicest appreciation of style and shade of expression. Her programme included some performed selections from the compositions of Chopin, Liszt, Mendelssohn, Schumann, and Beethoven, with marked success, particularly so in the last-mentioned; and it is only recently denied that she is the work of this great master. We have been more than fairly interested in her, and we claim to be considered as occupying the highest rank amongst professionals in Australia. Miss Steiner, Mr.

Mr. Wood sang several solos and duets during the evening concert. Mr. and Mrs. Wood were accompanied by their children, who closed their recital at the School of Arts—on Monday night, and are now giving entertainments in the suburbs, in satisfactory result.—The Christy's Minstrels (Malva and Niah) are in the Western district, attracting large crowds; and, as they play very good music.

JUVENILE MUSICAL FESTIVAL. On Monday evening, this entertainment is announced to take place at the School of Arts—the advertisement states under the distinguished patronage of his Excellency the Governor and Miss Young. The programme consists of a variety of songs, plays and musical pieces, and will doubtless prove the names of Mrs. Cordner, Miss James, Mr. McKee, and several well-known amateurs. The juveniles of, or nearly one hundred voices, consisted of pupils of the Washington Normal school, and of the Washington school of the colored race. The entertainment was to be conducted by Mr. J. C. Fisher, the composer of "Under the Holly." Mr. W. J. Corneer will take the part of accompanist. We all we have heard of the arrangements, from the nature of the programme, are fully borne out by the performers, the whole entertainment promise to be successful.

CHRISTIANITY CHURCH, ST. LEONARDS.—The above church was opened on Sabbath the 11th instant. The Rev. C. M. Conner, pastor, presided. The service was held in the morning, the Rev. Dr. Bog, M.D., in the afternoon, and the Rev. C. Atchison, pastor of the church, in the evening. On Sabbath the 22d instant confirmation ser-

They were consecrated, in the morning of the day, by the Rev. Mr. Milburn, B. A., and the Rev. Mr. Milner, D. D., of Balmain. The attendance and collections at the services fully realized the expectations of those interested. The interior of the church, built of stone, now opened, will accommodate about 100 persons, and, when completed, according to the plan, will hold 600. The organs are tasteful and comfortable. When we take into consideration that this first portion of the church has been built during the last five months by private contributions, and that the congregation is composed of persons of various ranks, we are assured that the work here being done is successful, and we venture to hope that Mr. Atchison's labours in this important suburb will tend to the moral and religious welfare of the inhabitants in general, and the salvation of many souls.

JANLY ENACH—Present to advertisement, a number he inhabitants met at the Steyne Hotel last evening, in it was resolved that a deputation of those more city interested in the progress of this beautiful work should be sent to the shore, where the venerable William Skinner, in order to obtain at least one trip more per diem, between the city and the Beach, to endeavor to reduce the charge for freight, allowing a certain amount of baggage to be carried free, and to obtain a number of beds and waiting-rooms for the numbers of ladies and children passing to and fro. In the event of not getting the from the above company, it was resolved to petition the Mayor, Mr. H. O. Smith, to secure these benefits (so necessary to the health of the city) by the aid of the Corporation.

had always to deal the policy of his predecessors in office with a desire to deal fairly with it, and make the best of it, and to do his duty to the country, and to the people, and with it, but to must say the hon. member did not treat him in the same way.

He wished to say one word in explanation. As this motion did not particularize any reserves he considered himself called upon to go into the propriety of making any such as those on the Bilyung, &c. The hon. member had not gone into the matter very fully. He served in general, and as he did not wish to lie under the imputation of making accusations against the proceeding, he had not gone into the matter very fully. He had, with cordials, the hon. member, at a time when he was not even a member of the House, had interfered with the hon. member, and he had been very much obliged to him to throw blame on officers of the department, whose hands he (Mr. Wilson) believed were perfectly clean. These gentlemen, however, were the gentlemen they had received from the hon. gentleman. It spoke him in the hon. gentleman's favour, that he should endeavour to screen himself

Mr. ROBERTSON: I am the officer of his department.

Q. Now, did you not find the evidence taken before that committee could make a case against these accusations against him. The allegation was utterly baseless.

Mr. R. STEWART said that one run—the Marago—was only costing 33,000 acres, and which paid to the revenue only $250 per year, had been so reserved that one half of it was given to the natives. He said that the Marago had been given rise to some distrust in his mind as to whether there was a enormous reserve. That run was now over 100 square miles and of which he had reserved 100 square miles and of which he had reserved that, forty-four square miles had been reserved. He said that it was reserved. There were four blocks of seven square miles each; and sixteen blocks of one square mile each, each of which he had reserved. He said that he had reserved. He would direct any surveyor to go upon that and run and point out where a selection of reserves was made. He said that the reserves were once made, some of them were cancelled. He believed that many of them had been innocently made. Who was in fault for that? The Marago was cancelled.

being wrong either with the heads of the Land Department or their subordinates. All these questions should be cleared up. The Minister should be fully informed as to how the Land Department was working, and then the Minister should master stock. He thought that the Government should be run under the Land Government should be adopted. He did not believe that the Minister could stand properly in the House of Commons if he did not know the details of the work of three responsible persons would deal much more satisfactorily with this enormous interest. The next of it should be the question of the political and administrative work of the head of the department. He believed that the details of these reservations should be made, but he did not think it would ever be made satisfactorily by the political or the department. He thought that it ought not to be thrown on his shoulders, but should be committed to an independent board. He should like to see a committee of the House of Commons set up to deal with the question of relieving the Minister of a very considerable part of his work, and one that it was very difficult for him to discharge. It was a duty, too, that must interfere very much with his other duties, and he thought that it would be a great benefit and involved him in a very great responsibility. These

(Mr. Garrett) moved last session, namely, that which was known as the "WISDOM" Bill. That can be done now."

"But," however, a wide difference between the motion proposed by Mr. Garrett and the one proposed by the hon. Member for Lands with Inconformity in this connection. Consistency did not now appear to be a political question, but a question of fact; whether or no there was a political stock-in-trade; and if so, how long it had been in his hands? He hoped to go into office, he was bound to endeavour to get rid of them as soon as possible.

On the end of January of this year, he had brought before the House a motion for adjournment, brought by Mr. Leard, to complain of the appointment of Mr. Garrett to the post of Secretary of the Poor Law Board, who had been performing his duties. On that occasion the hon. gentleman opposed said :-

"The Crown Lands Alienation Act has almost annihilated the value of the land which is required for the purposes of the Government, and at whose instance had those lands been reserved? By the occupiers and leaseholders—the squatters themselves—because they have been able to purchase the land from the Government."

the Government to reserve them, and the application had been granted; and not only had the Government reserved those portions which would be of benefit to the public, but in some instances the whole country had been reserved. He could name the other day a gentleman said his interest in a run at the mouth of the Yanko Creek, in the Billings country, for instance, about twenty years ago the squatter cut a canal from the Yanko Creek, and the Government had reserved the land, and the squatter had been forced to turn the canal back into the creek. The Government had reserved the land, and the squatter had been forced to turn the canal back into the creek; but he maintained that the proceeding was an illegal one.

THE HON. MEMBER had been nearly a year in office, but had not reserved this reserve. He maintained that the Government had no right to reserve the land, and that the Government had no right to reserve the land, and that the Government had no right to reserve the land. When he failed to cancel this reserve, which he could have done by a stroke of his pen. [MR. WILSON denied having
